CVS – THE EXECUTIVE POWERS

Federal Executive

Nigeria has a President for the Federation. The President is the Head of State, the Chief Executive of the Federation and the Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federation.

Nigeria also has a Vice President. For a person to be fully qualified for voting into the Presidency, he must nominate another person from his political party to run with him as Vice President.

Ministers exist in Nigeria. They are appointed by the President into offices of ministries as he requires.

State Executive

Each State in Nigeria has a Governor as its Chief Executive. The Governor shall have a Deputy, which must be appointed as running mate before he becomes qualified for the position of Governorship. A Governor appoints commissioners into offices as he requires.
