PHRASES

You may have a group of words that makes sense but not complete sense, for example:
into the house; at nine o'clock; for eight kobo.

Groups of words like these are called phrases. A sentence has a verb in it; a phrase hasn't. You can turn a phrase into a sentence by adding other words to it, but one of the words that you add must be a verb. For example: John went into the house.