MUSIC STUDIO AND THEATRE

A music studio is the place where musical instruments are kept and practiced with towards developing ones musical skill. It can also imply the pace where music is made.

Theatre is a sitting arena usually with a stage or space for performance to be carried out. Theatre is place where musician present their music piece before an audience after practicing in their studios.

A typical studio would contain at least one major (big-sized) music instrument, e.g. a piano. Also it ought to contain a shelve that contains musical literatures, especially those written in musical notation. Recording instruments are also very necessary in a music studio. Instruments that can be used in recording and mixing include computer, microphone, amplifier, and mixer.

A theatre serves for live shows were a musician or music group invites audience to come enjoy their musical performance live. The stage is the most important part of the theatre as it is the place everybody's eye is on. Its light should be given a considerable attention so to supplement the control of the mood around the theatre. Also dancers could perform live with the musician in the theatre so to give the music piece an energetic impact not just emotional impact.