ANALYTICAL STUDY OF ANIMALS

Apart from still life, another important aspect of fine art is life drawing. Animals are a major part of life drawing.

There are different kinds of animals: domestic animals, wild animals, water animals, etc. All of these groups of animals are associated to a kind of living environment and character.

Domestic and farm animals are usually the most drawn. Most of them are herbivores, i.e. they eat grass, while others eat flesh like dog, cat, etc. Their body shape usually shows their feeding character. For example, dogs are usually with small stomach unlike goats.

In drawing these animals, their single line diagram should be drawn first. This single line diagram represents their skeleton in drawing. Thereafter, lines could be used to make their actual shape and form.

Some categories of animals are:

Domestic/Farm Animals: dog, cat, cock, duck, horse, cattle, pig, sheep, rabbit, catfish, tilapia, donkey, camel, turkey, etc.

Wild Animals: python, lion, antelope, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, tiger, baboon, cheetah, hyena, eagle, hawk, giraffe, elephant, chimpanzee, etc.

Water Animals: whale, dolphin, tilapia, catfish, crab, prawn, periwinkle, etc.
